Digital real estate transactions get everyone moving in sync

In a world defined by the speed and convenience of online, on-demand services, real estate brokerages that still rely on manual, paper-based processes are losing business to digital challengers at an alarming rate. While brokerages that use electronic signatures are ahead of the curve, most are still struggling to simplify and accelerate the way they prepare, sign, act on and manage the many agreements involved in a real estate transaction. By modernizing how your brokerage manages agreements with DocuSign, you can close real estate transactions faster, with less risk, lower costs and better experiences for everyone involved.

Accelerate the transaction process

Digital tools make it possible to transform every step of a complex real estate transaction into a simple automated process. Eliminate the typical delays that result from wondering where a document is or waiting on an approval by guiding agents and TC’s through the transaction.

Simplify compliance

Increasingly digital and automated processes create new opportunities for regulatory compliance. Full audit trails provide the ability to view and report on who signed, reviewed or approved each step of your transaction, helping you easily deliver evidence of compliance and be fully prepared in the event of an audit.

Reduce administrative costs

Eliminate the costs associated with printing, shipping and storing documents. A modern system of agreement replaces manual workflows with digital signatures and automated processes, so you can do business faster and more cost-efficiently.

Elevate client and agent experience

Instead of managing the inefficient paperwork and manual processes involved in transactions, agents can focus on advising clients on neighborhoods, providing guidance during negotiations and growing their network.
